

PAID INTERNSHIP

3-6 months | Vilnius, Lithuania

This could be the start of your professional path

PPMi

Our proudest moments in 2017!

Do you have what it takes to provide evidence-based policy advice to the key decision makers at national and European level? Are you currently pursuing a degree in social sciences and want to put knowledge gained into practice? Does state-of-the art qualitative and quantitative analysis sounds like a challenge worth taking? If yes, we want to hear from you.

SHARPER SKILLS

PPMI will provide various opportunities to improve and develop your skills. We are looking for candidates that have:

- theoretical and practical knowledge of applied social science research methods
- interest in public policy, especially in fields of migration, education and social inclusion
- analytical and problem solving skills
- full English and Lithuanian proficiency and excellent writing skills

TAILORED APPROACH

We'll design your internship around your experience, to include some of the following:

- taking part in interviews, field visits, focus groups and analysing data with advanced qualitative and mixed methods
- collecting and critically analysing research studies
- drafting texts for project outputs or research proposals, including synthesising findings from different sources of data

IMMENSE GROWTH

We offer:

- flexible working schedule compatible with lectures and tripartite contract (if required by the university)
- opportunity to participate in high quality research which influences decision making among government leaders
- a rewarding working environment that allows you to grow personally and professionally
- training on methodological and thematic topics

If you think your skills are suitable for PPMi, send us your CV (careers@ppmi.lt) by February 21, 2018. The internship is expected to begin at the end of February or the beginning of March.
